Local Author and Technician Launches Nail It Right Publishing to Support Digital Literacy in the South Sound Community

Nail It Right Publishing, a new independent publishing imprint based in Parkland, Washington, has officially launched with a mission to help adults, seniors, and returning learners build confidence with modern technology.

Founded by local author and computer technician Donald Vaughn, who also writes under the pen name D’von, Nail It Right Publishing creates clear, accessible, beginner-friendly guides designed to make technology less intimidating for everyday users.

“Technology should empower people, not frustrate them,” Vaughn said. “My goal with Nail It Right Publishing is to give readers the knowledge they need to stay connected, stay safe, and stay confident — especially those who didn’t grow up with today’s digital tools.”

The company’s first release, Mastering Technology After 60, is now available on Amazon. Additional titles are already in development, and the official website, NailItRightPublishing.com, features resources, downloadable previews, and an interactive voting system that allows the community to help choose future book topics.

Nail It Right Publishing aims to become a trusted local resource for digital literacy, offering practical guidance for seniors, beginners, and anyone who wants to better understand their devices.
